SmarTrip's brain bigger, but slower
If you noticed the Metro fare gates take a beat longer to open when you tap down a SmarTrip card, don't replace the card. Metro says it recently upgraded its fare collection technology to handle more complex transactions with the electronic cards. But that means it's taking longer for the circular target on the fare gate to read the card information.

Man Crosses ‘Steal Police Vehicle’ off Bucket List

A Seattle police officer had his patrol car stolen Thursday by a handcuffed burglary suspect who had been put in the backseat. "It's very embarrassing for the officer," a spokeswoman said. "We're just lucky the shotgun and none of the other equipment was taken." The car was abandoned shortly after. He was recaptured — still in handcuffs — about four hours later. (AP)

A lot of patience was (mostly) all one Michigan lawn service owner needed to convince his lady to say "I do." Tommy Dafoe spelled out "Will U Marry Me" with fertilizer on the lawn of his home. Romanian senators have rejected a proposal to tax witches and fortune tellers. The law would have required witches and fortune-tellers to produce receipts and would also hold them liable for wrong predictions. One of the bill's supporters claimed the lawmakers were frightened of being cursed. Witch Maria Campina said it's difficult to tax fortune-tellers and witches partly because of the erratic sums of money they receive. (AP)

Fed. Court: Stem Cell Funding To Proceed

Washington

A federal appeals court on Thursday permitted federal funding of embryonic stem cell research to proceed for now, while it considers a judge's ruling that had temporarily shut off the funds.

Thursday's temporary court action may be a legal reprieve but not one for labs. The National Institutes of Health has suspended work to fund new research projects on embryonic stem cells, and while NIH did not immediately comment, observers say the scientific process needed to restart it is unlikely before a final court decision.

While scientists who already have received taxpayer money for stem cell experiments can continue their work until their dollars run out, 22 projects that were due to get yearly checks in September were told they'd have to find other money to continue their work.

The government is asking the appeals court in Washington to strike down a preliminary order by U.S. District Judge Royce Lamberth blocking federal funding for some stem cell research. PETE YOST (AP)

Colo. Wildfire Spurs Evacuation

169 homes destroyed by blaze; 3,500 are displaced for days

Boulder, Colo.

Residents in parts of Boulder are being told to prepare to evacuate in case a major fire burning in the foothills spreads into the Colorado city.

The warning came Thursday afternoon for people who live west of Broadway, the main north-south road on the west side of town. They're being urged to clear things like lawn furniture and propane tanks, mow tall grass and move brush from the west side of their homes to the east side to avoid fueling the fire. The city is mowing grass in open spaces.

Wind gusts were expected to reach 60 mph Thursday night, possibly fanning a wildfire that has destroyed at least 169 homes.

The winds were expected to pick up earlier than originally thought, leading authorities to close roads that had temporarily been opened to residents at 10 a.m. Residents who were set to be allowed in at 2 p.m. won't be able to get in at all.

Containment lines have been built around 30 percent of the 10-square-mile fire, but firefighters warned that progress could be undone if sparks jump the lines.

Wind gusts could blow away the little moisture the area has seen and spread the fire beyond the 20-mile-long perimeter.

"The wind event tonight, we could be off to the races," said Rob Bozeman, field observer with the Boulder Mountain Fire Protection District.

Nine people had been reported missing in the fire zone, but Cmdr. Rick Brough said they all have been accounted for.

About 3,500 people have been out of their homes for four days, and some residents have been frustrated with a lack of information about what was happening behind fire lines or because they couldn't do more to help. Some have gotten around roadblocks by hiking and biking in to check on their homes.

Drone Scare Vexes FAA

Fighter jets almost launched after craft enters restricted area

Washington

The U.S. military almost launched fighter jets, and discussed a possible shoot-down when an errant Navy drone briefly veered into restricted airspace near the nation's capital last month, a senior military official said Thursday.

The incident underscores safety concerns with unmanned aircraft as defense officials campaign to use them more often during natural disasters and for homeland security.

Navy Adm. James Winnefeld Jr., head of Northern Command, said Thursday that the Aug. 2 mishap could hamper the Pentagon's push to have the Federal Aviation Administration ease procedures for drone use by the military in domestic skies.

"It certainly doesn't help our case any time there's [an unmanned aerial vehicle] that wanders around a little bit outside of its controlled airspace," said Winnefeld, who also is commander of the U.S. North American Aerospace Defense Command. "We realize the responsibility on our part to include the technical capability and proper procedures. We'd just like to be able to get at it quicker."

An unmanned aircraft similar to the one shown went off course in early August.

Currently, drones are used for patrols and surveillance along the nation's southern border and sometimes at the northern border. But the military wants to use them more during hurricanes and other disasters to evaluate damage or target rescue efforts.

The FAA has been working for some time on new regulations governing the use of drones but has yet to complete them. And the August incident brought one of the FAA's key concerns to bear — the prospect that remote operators can lose communications with the aircraft.

Drones routinely operate in war zones, such as in Iraq and Afghanistan. LOLITA C. BALDOR (AP)

17 Killed in Russia Suicide Attack

Violent market blitz wounds nearly 140 in North Caucasus

Rostov-On-Don, Russia

Russian Prime Minister Vladimir Putin blamed extremists “without souls, without hearts” for a suicide car bombing that killed 17 people Thursday in the crowded central market of a city in the North Caucasus.

It was the fourth terrorist attack at the market in a decade, and while no one claimed responsibility, the Kremlin has been trying to contain Islamic militancy in the mountainous southern region of Russia.

Nearly 140 were wounded in the bombing in Vladikavkaz, the capital of North Ossetia, with about a half-dozen hospitalized in very serious condition.

Russian investigators examine the site of the blast near a market in Vladikavkaz.

The bomber drove to the market’s main entrance and detonated the explosives, the Emergency Situations Ministry said. The blast tore the car in half, littered the market square with shrapnel and blew out windows in nearby buildings, according to nationally broadcast video that also showed charred body parts, bloodstains on the

Somalia Refugees Describe Hellish Living Conditions at Camp

Dadaab, Kenya

Terrified Somalis fleeing an offensive by Islamist insurgents in their capital described a hellish scene of putrefying corpses, graves hastily dug in gardens and neighborhoods flattened by mortars.

Some of the lucky ones who fled

Mogadishu have arrived in refugee camps in neighboring Kenya, but poor families unable to take everyone faced agonizing choices over who could go and who must be left behind.

“This is the worst I have ever seen it,” said 74-year-old Abdullahi Mohammed Salah, who lost three sons in the past five months to a mortar round and gunfire. “Before, it was just bullets. Now, they are launching mortars everywhere.”

Somalis who reached the swollen refugee camp at Dadaab this week say bodies are rotting in Mogadishu’s streets and hospitals are overflowing, with the wounded covering the floors and lying outside.

On Thursday, Mogadishu’s airport was attacked. Suicide bombers set off a car bomb, and at least 14 people were killed.

Located 50 miles south of the Somali border, Dadaab is one of the largest refugee camps in the world. KATHARINE HOURELD (AP)

Sarah Shourd, center, will be released Saturday. Shane Bauer and Josh Fattal remain.

One of Three U.S. Hikers to Be Freed

To honor Ramadan's end, Iran will release female captive Sat.

Tehran, Iran

Iran said Thursday it will free Sarah Shourd, one of three Americans jailed for more than 13 months, as an act of clemency to mark the end of the Islamic holy month of Ramadan.

The imprisonment of the Americans has deepened tensions between the U.S. and Iran, a relationship already strained over Washington's suspicions that Tehran is trying to manufacture nuclear weapons — something Iran denies.

Bak Sahraei, the second counselor of Iran's U.N. mission, sent an e-mail confirming the release of Shourd, following up an earlier text message from the Culture Ministry telling reporters to come to a Tehran hotel on Saturday morning to witness the release.

Pardoning Prisoners

Releasing prisoners and showing clemency is a common practice in the Muslim world during the fasting month of Ramadan. Iranian President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad has in the past proposed swapping the three for Iranians he says are jailed in the U.S., raising fears that the Americans are being held as bargaining chips. (AP)

"Offering congratulations on Eid al-Fitr," the ministry text message said, referring to the feast that marks the end of Ramadan. "The release of one of the detained Americans will be Saturday at 9 a.m. at the Estaghlal hotel."

The gesture could be a calculated move by Iran to soften international criticism of its judiciary. Iran has faced a growing storm of protest over a stoning sentence for a woman convicted of adultery that has been temporarily suspended. (AP)

Koran Burning Called Off

Pastor plans to meet with N.Y. imam on 9/11 anniversary about moving mosque

Gainesville, Fla.

The leader of a tiny church on Thursday backed off his threat to burn the Koran, saying he gave up the plan in exchange for a deal to move a planned Islamic center and mosque away from New York's ground zero. The imam planning the center, however, quickly denied any such deal.

The Rev. Terry Jones had been under intense pressure to back off, including a statement from President Obama and a personal call from U.S. Defense Secretary Robert Gates. Jones made his announcement outside his church alongside Imam Muhammad Musri, the president of the Islamic Society of Central Florida.

After the news conference, Musri told The Associated Press there was an agreement for him and Jones to travel to New York and meet Saturday — on the actual anniversary of the 9/11 attacks — with the imam overseeing plans to build a mosque near ground zero.

"I told the pastor that I personally believe the mosque should not be there, and I will do everything in my power to make sure it is moved," Musri said. "But there is not any offer from there [New York] that it will be moved. All we have agreed to is a meeting, and I think we would all like to see a peaceful resolution."

Imam Feisal Abdul Rauf said he was surprised by the announcement and that he would not barter.

Speaking to reporters later, Jones was adamant that he was promised that the Islamic center would be moved, and said he would be "very, very disappointed" if it were not.

Jones, the pastor of a Florida Pentecostal church of 50 members, has said that he believes the Koran is evil because it espouses

"If it's not moved, then I think Islam is a very poor example of religion. I think that would be very pitiful. I do not expect that."

"We are not going to toy with our religion or any other. Nor are we going to barter. We are here to extend our hands to build peace and harmony."

something other than biblical truth and incites radical, violent behavior among Muslims.

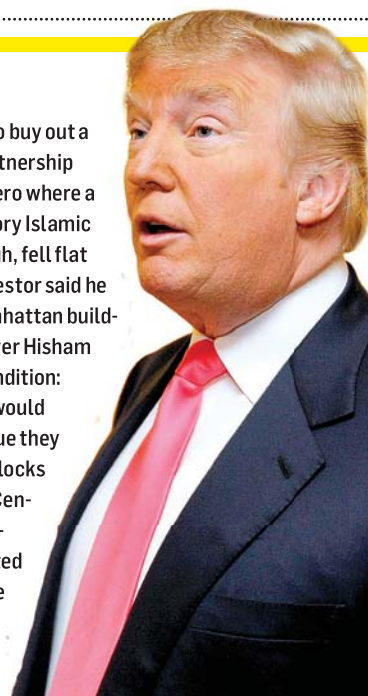

Jones on Thursday said he prayed about the decision and that if the site of the mosque was moved, it would be a sign from God to call off the Koran burning.

"We are, of course, now against any other group burning Korans," Jones said during the news conference. "We would right now ask no one to burn Korans. We are absolutely strong on that. It is not the time to do it."

His decision comes after a firestorm of criticism from leaders around the world. Obama, the top U.S. general in Afghanistan and several Christian leaders had urged Jones to reconsider his plans. They said his actions

Trump Rejected

Donald Trump offered Thursday to buy out a major investor in the real estate partnership that controls the site near ground zero where a Muslim group wants to build a 13-story Islamic center and mosque. The offer, though, fell flat nearly instantly. The real estate investor said he would buy his stake in the lower Manhattan building for 25 percent more than whatever Hisham Elzanaty paid. Trump attached a condition: The backers of the mosque project would need to promise that any new mosque they constructed would be at least five blocks farther away from the World Trade Center site. Elzanaty's response was unequivocal. "If he were really interested in buying the building, he would have come forward with at least $20 million," said the investor's lawyer, Wolodymyr Starosolsky. (AP) would endanger U.S. soldiers and provide a strong recruitment tool for Islamic extremists. Jones' protest also drew criticism from religious and political leaders from across the Muslim world.

They warned that the plan would put Americans in danger around the world. In Afghanistan, hundreds of angry Afghans burned an American flag and chanted "Death to the Christians" to protest the planned Koran burning.

Musri thanked Jones and his church members "for making the decision today to defuse the situation and bring to a positive end what has become the world over a spectacle that no one would benefit from except extremists and terrorists" who would use it to recruit future radicals. Gray Wants FBI Probe of Fenty

Council chair asks for investigation into claims of vote-buying

Washington

D.C. Council Chairman Vincent C. Gray said Thursday that he will ask federal law enforcement officials to investigate reports that Mayor Adrian M. Fenty's re-election campaign offered young adults jobs in exchange for their votes, a potential violation of federal election law.

Gray and his advisers say they decided to turn to the FBI because they are increasingly worried about the integrity of the Sept. 14 Democratic primary.

"We are deeply concerned," Gray said at a news conference in front of his campaign headquarters in Chinatown. "There are very few things that are more sacrosanct, sacred, than the voting process, and we want to make sure it's fully preserved in the city."

The FBI referred questions to the Justice Department's Criminal Division, which declined to comment.

Emerging from a pep rally Thursday morning with U.S. Secretary of Education Arne Duncan to congratulate the high-performing School Without Walls Senior High School, Fenty responded to the allegations.

"We do extensive training. We let everybody know that's prohibited," Fenty said. "If there's an allegation that someone has made a mistake, bring it to us and we'll take action." TIM CRAIG AND ANN E. MARIMOW (THE WASHINGTON POST)

Woman Charged After D.C. Crash

Washington

Police have charged a 23-year-old Mitchellville, Md., woman with aggravated assault and driving while under the influence in connection with a Wednesday night crash that injured two female pedestrians in Adams Morgan.

Police have not identified the victims but said one was listed in critical condition at a nearby hospital with injuries to her head and torso. The other was listed in serious condition. The driver, who police identified as Chamica Adams, was arrested at the scene.

The pedestrians were apparently on a traffic island waiting for the light to change when the driver,

Don't Worry, Be Happy

Optimistic Redskins eager to open season versus rival Cowboys

The Redskins

Some sang. Some chided their locker neighbors. Someone else playfully threw an object across the room and ducked.

The mood in the locker room at Redskins Park on Monday afternoon wasn't representative of a team that collectively thought it was about to go 4-12 for a second-consecutive season. Do they know something we don't?

Mike Shanahan could not have a larger stage on which to start his Redskins tenure than Sunday night at home against Dallas in front of a national television audience. "I know how big a game this is," he said.

Shanahan's understated. That's his thing. His players are a little more open with their feelings.

"It's exciting," defensive end Phillip Daniels said. "A Sunday night game against your division rivals. You can't ask for more."

The transition to a new coaching regime always fosters goodwill among fans — even if it is the fifth coaching change since 2001. But after playing in a losing scheme last season, the players seem to be excited about the changes, too.

But in a league in which the only gauge of success anyone remembers is winning, the Redskins have some things stacked against them this weekend:

The Redskins seem excited to have new coach Mike Shanahan, second from left, at the helm after two disappointing seasons.

Dallas Weak

A look at how new Redskins coaches fared in their first games against Dallas:

YEAR	COACH	RESULT
1994	Norv Turner	L 7-34
2001	Marty Schottenheimer	L 7-9
2002	Steve Spurrier	L 20-27
2004	Joe Gibbs*	L 18-21
2008	Jim Zorn	W 26-24

(*THIS WAS GIBBS' SECOND STINT AS REDSKINS HEAD COACH)

1. Washington switched to a 3-4 defense in the offseason. And while they've been successful at creating turnovers in the preseason — a source of frustration in recent years — they haven't been going against first-team offenses for four quarters, either.

2. The Redskins have a new quarterback — Donovan McNabb — who has been injured in the preseason and three new offensive linemen. They can't be expected to play together seamlessly from the first snap.

3. The Cowboys have one of the most talented rosters in the NFL.

Good feelings aside, few expect Shanahan to revive the Redskins in one year. And while everyone is optimistic, it's unlikely those who've spent the last few winters in D.C. will lose perspective.

"We have no bragging rights at all, going 0-6 in your division and being at the bottom," linebacker Lorenzo Alexander said. "We definitely want to go out there and set a tone and get some wins early."

THE REDSKINS WILL WIN IF ...

1 The game turns into a coaches duel. Here's one case in which the Redskins have an advantage. Mike Shanahan is a top-notch tactician, and the Cowboys seem on the cusp of firing Wade Phillips every year. All things being equal, Shanahan's offense should be able to pick apart Phillips' defense. The question becomes: Is Dallas' talent base that much better than Washington's?

They win the battle of Trent — Williams, that is. The rookie left tackle doesn't have an easy first test when squaring off against DeMarcus Ware, who's averaged 10 sacks per season since 2005. Williams has the athleticism to hold off Ware, but the experience he needs can only be gained by playing. The Redskins hope Donovan McNabb doesn't end up on his back too often as Williams gets his feet wet.

3 They borrow a trick from Benjamin Button. You'll recall the character curiously aged in reverse, evolving from a little old man into Brad Pitt. The Redskins have plenty of graybeards who will need to revert to their prior All-Pro forms to succeed. This will be a story line all season, starting with the Cowboys game.

3UP, 3DOWN

HOW THE REDSKINS COULD WIN OR LOSE THIS WEEK

THE REDSKINS WILL LOSE IF ...

1

Albert Haynesworth spends more time on the sideline than on the field. Last year, it was a matter of the defensive lineman's feigning injuries. Now, though, Haynesworth's inactivity would be a result of a feud with Mike Shanahan. The problem is the Redskins have no one with the skills the lineman possesses. The coach can ill afford to cost his new team a game just to make a point.

Donovan McNabb's eyes grow green with envy over Dez Bryant. The rookie wideout is healthy after missing the preseason and says he's ready to "unleash" on Sunday. Given the Redskins' problems at wide receiver, it would be especially painful to see Bryant star in his debut. After a lost year due to an NCAA penalty, how rusty will Bryant be?

3 Fans memorize the punter's name. Gone is the always fun Hunter Smith, and in his place is Josh Bidwell. He's important only if the Redskins' offense isn't clicking, which is a distinct possibility after Donovan McNabb's ankle injury. The Cowboys can put up points, so it will be up to the offense to produce. That isn't happening if Bidwell is on the field.

Terps' Tate Develops Into a Showstopper

Terps Football

Kenny Tate's phone was blowing up.

The game had barely ended. It hadn't been long since the Maryland safety sapped the last bit of drama from the final minute with a punishing, impenetrable goal-line stop of Navy's talented option quarterback Ricky Dobbs.

"The game was on the line," Tate said of the decisive moment in the Terrapins' 17-14 victory. "Pretty much everybody in the stands, everybody in the game knew that Ricky Dobbs was going to have the ball. We just had to find a way to stop him. I seen the hole and I knew he was going to run there. It opened up perfectly, and I was there right on time."

With his shining moment on a nationally televised game, he became an instant celebrity. Dozens took to the Web to celebrate his play, many of them recounting how they knew him before he was famous. "Twitter was about 70 to 80 mentions," Tate said.

The tweets, texts and phone calls have hardly eased since then. The junior finished with a career-high 12 tackles and forced two critical fumbles. On Tuesday, Tate was named the national defensive player of the week.

This was the type of recognition that many envisioned for Tate coming out of DeMatha. He was among the top 100 recruits in the nation after the 2007 season, and many forecasted that he'd be a star — as a wide receiver.

But by the fall of 2008, he'd become a defensive back. His first two seasons passed nondescriptly. He played in 23 games but started only four.

With Morgan State up next after the Navy win, the Terps believe Tate is ready to start fulfilling the hype. "I'm definitely in sync playing safety," Tate said. "I really don't know what it is. I guess it's just capability and opportunity." DEREK TURNER

Kenny Tate, right, stops Ricky Dobbs to preserve Maryland's win over Navy.

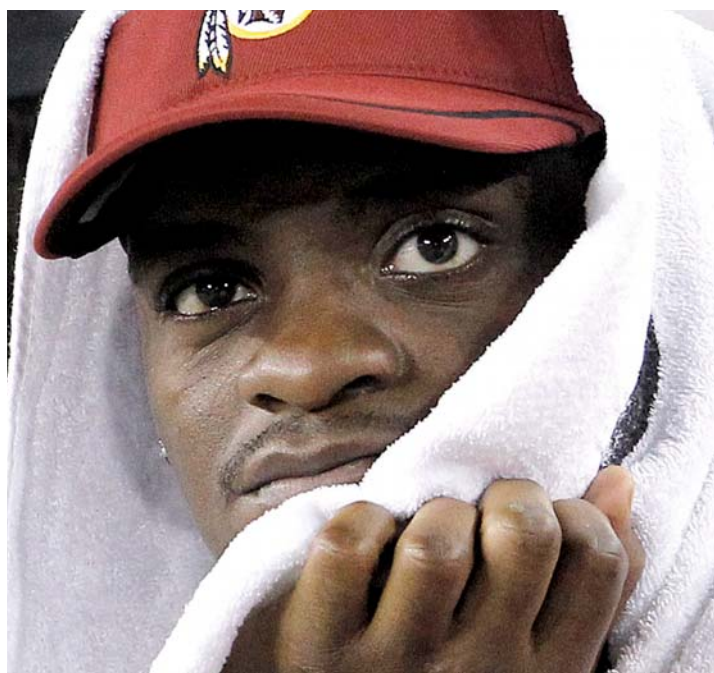

Portis Has a Brand-New Attitude

'It's like a family,' says Redskins RB of shift in locker room

The Redskins

A lot has been made about the new attitude surrounding the Redskins this year. But when you look at individual players, perhaps no one has embraced and exemplified the change as much as running back Clinton Portis.

"It's like a family," Portis said of this year's team. "In previous years past, everybody went home; when people left from over here, they went home. It was, like, 'I'll see you tomorrow at work.' ... I think it's just a team vibe all of a sudden. I think everybody's bought into, 'We tired of losing.'"

Clinton Portis says he reflected on his place with the Redskins while injured last year.

Sitting out the final eight games of last season gave Portis a lot of time to reflect on his place in the organization. "I think it gave me a chance to go out, take a look in the

Progress Doesn't Mean Postseason

The Redskins needed to grow up, and grow up they did this offseason. Did they go too far? Time will tell.

One thing is certain as the Mike Shanahan era officially begins Sunday: The team won't be an embarrassment anymore. The culture change began with bringing in Bruce Allen as general manager. Shanahan followed suit, and has proved he won't be bullied around by players as Jim Zorn was.

By Matt Swenson

There's genuine leadership off the field, and, more importantly, on the field as well, with Donovan McNabb and London Fletcher.

That doesn't mean the Redskins are a playoff team. Far from it.

First of all, the Albert Haynes-

The Redskins are still an old team missing the playmakers ... to reach the playoffs.

worth saga has to end. Shanahan didn't do the team any favors by evading a question about whether the nose tackle will be in D.C. all season.

The coach's tactics have had one positive effect: McNabb and Clinton Portis are sticking up for Haynesworth now, making him feel wanted.

Maybe that was Shanahan's plan all along: Turn Haynesworth into a better teammate even if it means ruining the coach-player relationship.

Haynesworth must prove that McNabb and Portis are right in saying Washington can't win without him.

Regardless, the Redskins are still an old team missing the playmakers on offense to reach the playoffs.

The team is headed in the right direction, but you can't go from kindergarten to law school overnight.

Brady Is Unhurt In Car Accident

Pro Football

New England Patriots quarterback Tom Brady was in a two-car accident near his home Thursday morning but was unhurt and hours later practiced as usual with his team just days before the season opener.

The crash at an intersection in Boston's Back Bay area knocked over a light pole and sent a passenger in the other vehicle to the hospital with injuries that were serious but not considered life-threatening, officials said.

A witness told The Associated Press that the two-time Super Bowl MVP was approaching the intersection on a green light when his Audi collided with a minivan. Police said 49-year-old Ludgero Rodrigues, the driver of the van who was seriously injured, was cited Thursday for failing to stop at a red light.

The Patriots open their season at home Sunday against the Cincinnati Bengals. (AP)

COWBOYS (MINUS 3) AT REDSKINS

REDSKINS

Even Jim Zorn won his first game against the Cowboys. No pressure, Shanahan.

RAVENS (PLUS 2.5) AT JETS

RAVENS

Jets will get some real "Hard Knocks" from Ray Lewis and the Birds.

BENGALS (PLUS 4.5) AT PATRIOTS

PATRIOTS

PACKERS (MINUS 3) AT EAGLES

PACKERS

The boo birds will sing early and often as Kevin Kolb gets the McNabb treatment.

FALCONS (MINUS 2) AT STEELERS

FALCONS

Matt Ryan versus Dennis Dixon doesn't seem like a fair fight.

COWBOYS

The Redskins have more drama than "Jersey Shore" and less talent than Dallas.

RAVENS

I'll take the third-year QB—Flacco—over the second-year guy: Sanchez.

BENGALS

Cincinnati tends to win one road game per year that nobody expects it to.

PACKERS

The Packers are arguably the best team in the NFC, and Kolb is a semi-mystery.

STEELERS

Tomlin has been preparing for an opener with Big Ben for a lot longer than you think.

COWBOYS

But there's no way the Redskins go 0-for-the-NFC East again.

JETS

"The Jets are overrated" is now more clichéd than "Watch out for the Jets."

BENGALS

Brady may have gotten into a car wreck, but the Bengals are fixing for a train wreck.

PACKERS

Says here both Donovan McNabb and Kevin Kolb lose their openers at home.

FALCONS

Ah, yes. The Dennis Dixon Era. Can't wait to tell my grandchildren I lived through it.

COWBOYS

The Redskins have a new coach, a new QB and they still won't win. Dallas is better.

RAVENS

There may not be a better time to visit Revis Island this year.

BENGALS

Three stars on the Pats' offense want new deals, and the defense looks pedestrian.

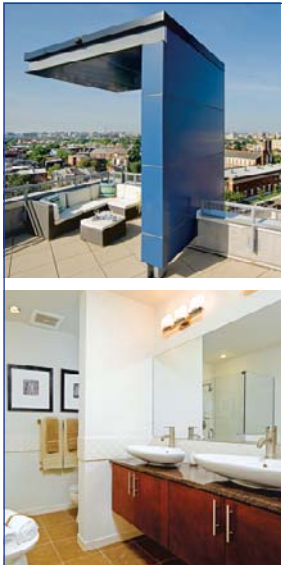

PACKERS

The Packers are on the short list of Super Bowl contenders.

FALCONS

The Falcons are on the way up while the Steelers are on the way down.

Isabel Toledo

FASHION DESIGNER, SHOE COLLECTOR

When first lady Michelle Obama wore a lemongrass silk ensemble by Isabel Toledo to her husband's 2009 inauguration, Obama vaulted the Cuban-American designer from cult figure to frock star. Her bold-yet-femme dresses and jackets appeal to those in the upper tax brackets, but Toledo's now branched out with a line of cheap-chic shoes for Payless. We grilled her about high-meets-low fashion and the White House fashionista.

What was it like to work with less costly materials on this line?
I approached the shoe line as industrial design. I wanted it to be very graphic, like a logo on your foot.

Any fave shoes in the group?
The ghillies, which are like my walking shoes. And the red and black pump [shown, $45, Payless stores] — the heel is set so perfectly, you can dance in it. It's very caliente [hot]!

How is designing footwear different from doing clothes?
Other than the fact that I can't make shoes myself, I go through the same process of thought. I draw something, tell the technical studio at Payless what I'm feeling, what I want to capture.

Do you enjoy shoe design?
I love designing shoes. They're where you start your body language, and they dictate where you're standing and how you're standing.

Do any shoes in your own closet inspire you?

I have a collection of 19th-century shoes. I used to wear those witch booties in high school. They had metal bottoms, and I wore them right through. I come from a shoe family — they had factories in Cuba before the revolution. It's funny how I ended up in the same place!

“I love designing shoes. They're where you start your body language.”

How has your life changed since Michelle Obama wore your ensemble at the inauguration?

I do what I always have done — but now people listen to what I say and are interested in my work.

What's it been like watching Michelle Obama's fashion choices since then?

Great. She lets you know she's comfortable in her own skin. She wears different looks and high and low, which is so new on that stage.

What haven't you designed that you'd like to try?

I'd love to do jewelry. It's personal, like perfume. It really captures emotions. Jewelry needs the same approach as shoes. Both should be a message and capture an emotion. JENNIFER BARGER (EXPRESS)

Isabel Toledo's new line for Payless includes a furry boot ($60) and sexy peep-toe ($45).

Grab BagBang, Bang, Bang On the Door

IT'S FASHION WEEK, but most dudes aren't interested in whether leopard-print heels or jeggings strut down the runway. They might care about Marc Jacobs Bang ($75, Macys.com), the designer's first men's cologne in almost a decade. Our manly testers found that the cedar and peppery mix smelled a bit like a macho Christmas morning, even if it was dreamt up by a fellow who wears a kilt. Still, images of sugarplums certainly didn't inspire this, er, bangin' bottle.

JOAN HOLLOWAY and Betty Draper watched round TVs, and they had to leave the house to buy things they saw advertised on them. But Friday at 9 p.m., in a fashionable gesture of old-gone-new, QVC debuts the MOD collection, a "Mad Men"-inspired group of faux fur scarves (shown, $33), princess-y pink velvet coats and leopard-print bags by Janie Bryant, the show's costume designer. Wearing them brings vintage vroom to fall outfits without your having to put on a girdle or swill gin at lunch.

HOT PINK CHERRY blossoms, neon-red dahlias and other dreamy flowers bloom on Gaby Basora's hippie-chic Tucker line of dresses and tops. Dear Manolo

ANSWERS FROM THE SHOE BLOGGER

After what seemed like an interminable summer, my two daughters, ages 5 and 7, have gone back to school. Can you recommend some cute shoes for them? — DIANE Manolo says, this is the question that should perhaps be asked of some other footwear expert, for the Manolo holds the most outdated notions of what the childrens should be wearing. The Manolo is still very "pro" Little Lord Fauntleroy for the boys, although from what the Manolo's friends tell him, such clothing would be the quickest way to introduce your little man to something called the "atomic wedge," which sounds most unpleasant.

As for girls, everywhere the Manolo looks, they are dressed up like the mini-hussies, in the Hooters shirts and the Duke of Daisy shorty-shorts.

Sadly, from what the Manolo can see, the only place one can purchase the respectable and cute clothing for the childrens is from expensive retailers with fanciful names like "Bu and the Duck," "Papo d'Anjo" and "Your Superiorly Special Child Outshines All Others in His Custom-Made, Organic Cotton, Nostalgia-Inspired Trousers."

If your goal is to shod your child in a well-made classic that won't go out of style, buy the Dingo from Aster Kids ($74, Zappos.com) in the red leather.

Ask the Manolo a question at manolo@shoeblogs.com. Visit the Manolo at shoeblogs.com.

Unleaven Heaven

WE KNOW: Eating matzos happens during Passover, not during this month's Jewish high holy days. But Matzel Toff! ($12 a box, Dean & DeLuca, 3276 M St. NW; 202-342-2500), a new confection, tastes too good to keep it in reserve until next April — and it's not dairy kosher anyhow. Sheets of crackery matzoh get coated with toffee and dark chocolate, then sprinkled with sea salt for a crunchy combo that'd even make a goyim swoon.

DON'T CROWD THE BOARD

Just like wine, cheese announces itself by smell — and should be sniffed before you chomp into it. But that's impossible if you place a stinky Gorgonzola beside a mild Havarti. Sue Sonley, co-owner of Cowgirl Creamery (919 F St. NW; 202-393-6880), recommends serving the strongest ones on separate boards. "If you put a really strong, creamy bleu cheese next to a fresh goat cheese, the smells start to run into each other." Also, three's a party on a small cheese board. Separate the weak from the strong and use a different knife for each type.

DO EXPERIMENT WITH MILK SOURCES AND STYLES

Cheese can come from any milk-producing animal. That means buffalo, llama and even camel milk can be fermented into deliciousness. But for the most part, you'll get a nice range of tastes from the traditional holy trinity of the cheese course: cow, goat and sheep. Mix fresh styles (feta, mozzarella) with semi-ripened varieties (Camembert), blues (Gorgonzola) or hard ones (pecorino, Parmesan) for an array of flavors and textures. And consider globe-trotting, too, as in doling out English cheddar alongside pungent blue Spanish Cabrales. But don't go overboard: Three to five fromages amounts to a sampling; 20 means you have an unseemly crush on the cheesemonger at Whole Foods.

Don't Know Jack?

BECOME A CHEESE WHIZ WITH OUR TIPS ON HOW TO CUT IT, SERVE IT AND STORE IT

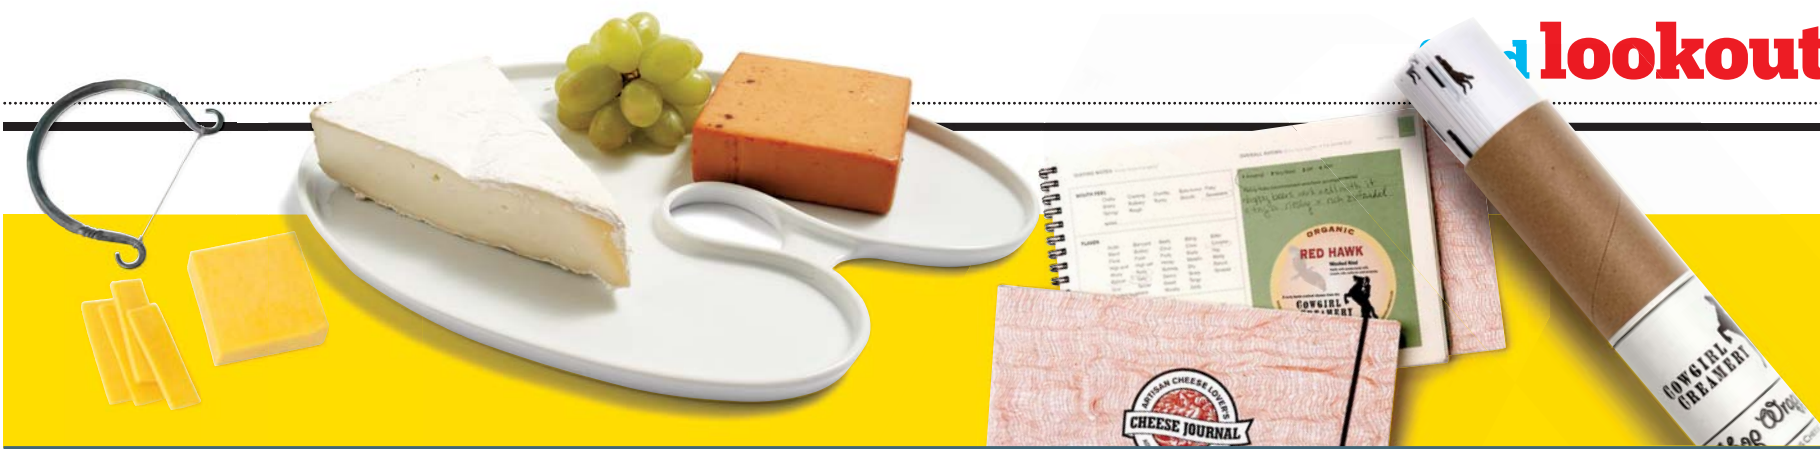

You wouldn't take your boss to dinner at Proof and order a box of Franzia. So, why are you still serving hunks of Velveeta or digging out the center of your brie as if it's a softshell crab? "That's the worst!" says fromage pro Laura Werlin, author of "Cheese Essentials" ($25, Stewart, Tabori & Chang). "If you cube cheese at a party, I question the quality of the cheese or how much the host invests in it." Anyone who has ever gone nose to nose with a snooty French waiter knows there's an etiquette for presenting (and tasting!) fromage. But how can you dish up dairy delights at a bash without intimidating your guests or sending them into lactic shock? We checked in with cheese pros (aka the Gods of Gouda) about the do's and don'ts of everything from bleu to Zamorano (a Spanish sheep queso). KATHERINE BOYLE (EXPRESS)

DON'T SERVE COLD CHEESE

Leaving a hunk of Taleggio in your car for hours will spoil your party (and your Prius). But so would plopping Manchego straight from the refrigerator onto the platter. "You're going to get the best flavor at room temperature. That's when the cheese will really express texture," Werlin says. Jill Erber, owner of Cheesetique, the popular queso store/resto in Alexandria (2411 Mount Vernon Ave.; 703-706-5300), agrees; "You should always take cheese out of the refrigerator an hour before serving it to ensure that it's not too cold for your guests." Plus, the refrigerator dries and hardens cheese, muting its taste and changing its texture.

Other Tasteful Serving Ideas

DO THE WHITE (WINE) THING

Fruity, sweet or sparkling white wines (Rieslings, Sauvignon Blancs) tend to work best if you're serving a range of cheeses, since they won't blast your palate like rich reds do. Some reds do play well with queso, but keep Merlots far from salty or fresh cheeses, since they'll exaggerate the vino's dryness. But when it doubt, "Choose a white wine that's a little sugary. Sweet Rieslings are perfect for most cheeses, or a pinot noir if you insist on red," says Jill Erber of Alexandria's Cheesetique (2411 Mt. Vernon Ave.; 703-706-5300).

DON'T BE A BLOCKHEAD

Frequent crashers of congressional happy hours or gallery openings know the menu: cheap white wine and 1-inch squares of neon-orange cheddar. But cubing cheese is not only unappetizing (who wants to eat waxy building blocks?); it also changes the taste. "As soon as you cut cheese, the flavors begin to evaporate," says Cowgirl Creamery's Sonley. Ideally, that hunk of Manchego or roll of chevre should look like itself, meaning you cut it along lines parallel to its original shape — long slices of Manchego and little rounds of goat cheese.

OH, RATS!

Bye, Triscuits And Cheddar

Cheese and crackers go together like Forest Gump and bad analogies, right? Nope. The cheese should stand alone. "Salty crackers are bad; they overwhelm cheese. Baguette is better," Werlin says.

Bag Plastic

Like its pal vino, cheese must breathe. Refrigerate hard ones in cheese paper (see above) or a damp cloth, not plastic wrap, which'll dry them out and impart icky flavors. Soft, fresh cheeses go in Tupperware. "Refrigerators can be dry and hostile," Werlin says. "Keep cheese on the lowest shelves, where there is more humidity."

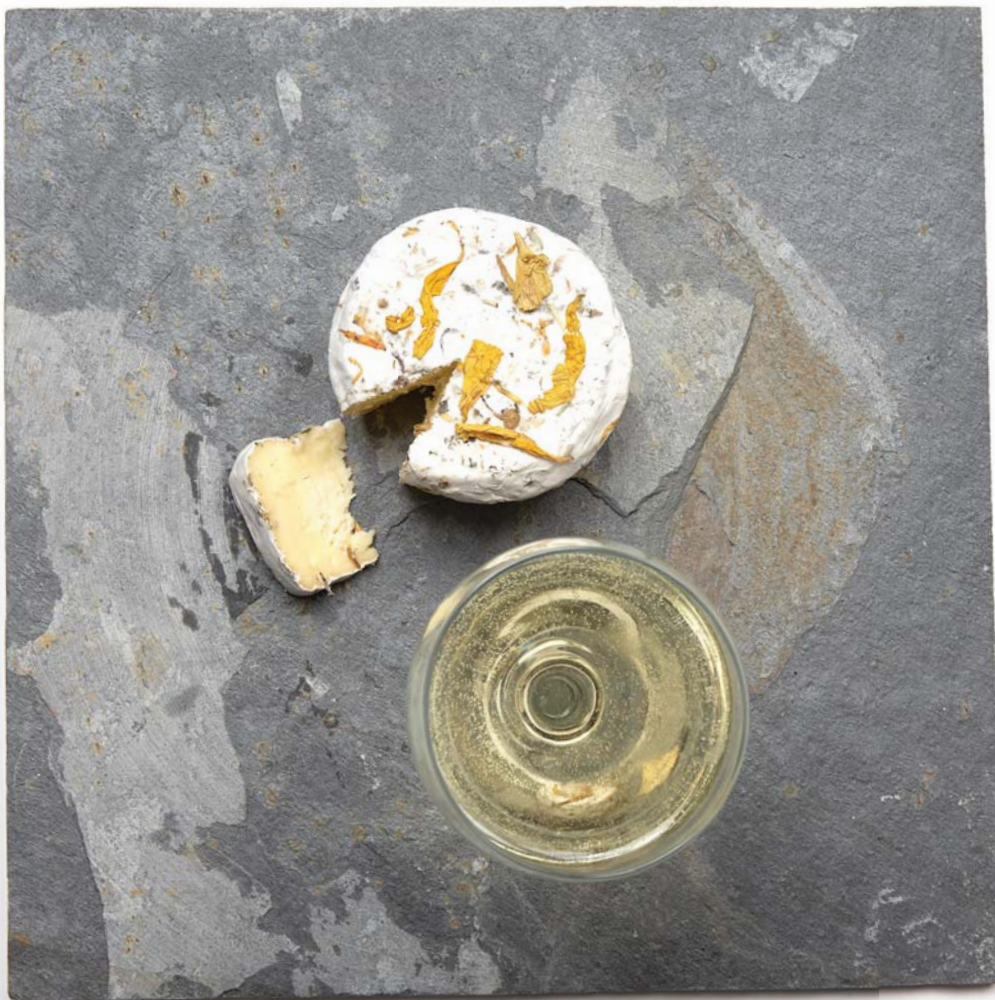

Moo to the Neighborhood

Not everyone has a cheesemonger for a mother or a token French friend. If you're still living on pepper Jack or Laughing Cow, these specialty shops will help you navigate the overwhelming world of (usually) pasteurized pleasures. P.S.: Whole Foods cheese counters — particularly the P Street one — also sell a great range of the smelly, salty and sublime.

CHEESETIQUE (above, 2411 Mt. Vernon Ave., Alexandria; 703-706-5300) Enter under a striped awning and take a whiff: You'll feel like you just stepped off a Paris street. This shop-and-eat mecca serves wines by the glass or bottle, and dozens of imported and domestic cheeses to eat there or take home. Owner Jill Erber's favorite pairing: a bloomy Chaource (a Brie-like cow's milk cheese) and Champagne.

COWGIRL CREAMERY (919 F St. NW; 202-393-6880) Bay Area cheesemakers Sue Conley and Peggy Smith churn out 3,000 pounds of organic queso each week. Their only East Coast outpost sells both their products (mmm, buttery Mt. Tam) and dozens of wedges and hunks from other European and American small-scale producers. "Most Americans don't know much about cheese," Conley says. "They're looking for sharp cheddar or creamy Brie. We expand their repertoire to more subtle flavors." Her ideal combo: semi-firm Cowgirl Creamery Pierce Point and sauvignon blanc.

LA FROMAGERIE (1222 King St., Alexandria; 703-879-2467) A onetime chef in Europe, Frenchman Sebastien Tavel and his wife, Mary, bring their amour of fromage to this old-timey storefront. For parties, they'll make up a cheese board ($50) of three types of their range of U.S. and imported varieties. They can even construct a four-tiered cheese "cake" — aka, a wedding-worthy stack that'll impress even your foodie friends.

Cowgirl Creamery's Pierce Point cow's milk cheese is round, like pie, so slice it in wedges like the dessert to taste the queso in its entirety. Pair it with Sauvignon Blanc; for other vino-queso combos, see CowgirlCreamery.com/library.

I have a calendar to keep track of release dates so I can at least vaguely plan out my columns. (Yes, an actual paper calendar. No, I am not Amish.) Now that Labor Day has come and gone, my calendar has opened up.

By Kristen Page-Kirby

And, for the most part, gotten way more interesting.

On today's date is "Resident Evil," but there wasn't a press screening, and I probably wouldn't have gone if there were.

Then comes "Never Let Me Go" on Sept. 15, and I wouldn't miss that one even if I weren't getting paid, since the book was one of the most genuinely creepy novels I've read in years. "Easy A" looks pretty good, and that's the week after. But most of the squares are dominated by titles with "(limited)" after them, meaning there's a bunch of indie flicks waiting to take over theaters. "I'm Still Here," "Howl," "Nine Nation Animation": I'm excited for them all.

I like mainstream movies, and I love the summer movie season, when there's always something to see. But as school starts and blankets go back onto beds, new releases tend to be quieter and more thoughtful, giving my brain the exercise and the rest it needs after the summer storm. Cinematic cross-training, if you will. "Harry Potter" and "Tron" and Narnia all lurk in the late fall and winter, but for now I'll settle back with my lovely indies.

After announcing his "retirement" from movies, Joaquin Phoenix agreed to be the subject of a documentary by Casey Affleck.

Where's Joaquin?

'I'm Still Here' raises more questions than answers about the actor's weird behavior

Film Review

If you're looking for an answer to the question of whether Joaquin Phoenix's "retirement" from acting and abortive second career as a rapper are, as some have claimed, all part of an elaborate hoax, you won't find it by reading this review. You won't find it by watching the movie "I'm Still Here" either.

The fascinating, frustrating new documentary — by actor Casey Affleck, who is married to Phoenix's sister Summer and who seems to have been granted unfettered, round-the-clock access — purports to chart Phoenix's bizarre career suicide since announcing he was quitting movies after his 2008 art-house film "Two Lovers."

But the movie is as damnably perplexing as the subject himself.

Much of it feels like watching a news cameraman take pictures of someone who has just poured gasoline on himself and is about to light a match. You'll find yourself wondering one thing, over and over, as Phoenix snorts coke off the breast of a naked hooker; weeps openly; and dives into an audience to assault a heckler during a rap performance and then vomits. It's this: Why doesn't Affleck put the camera down and do something? Why doesn't Phoenix's manager — or any of his many gofers and lackeys — say anything?

Then come the film's closing credits, which include a "cast" list crediting such performers as Affleck's father, Tim, in the role of Phoenix's father. Which suddenly

Rumors

Were We Punked?

At a press conference at the Venice Film Festival, Casey Affleck said "I'm Still Here" was not a "hoax" in the style of "Candid Camera," the Wall Street Journal reported. Affleck called the film "a sympathetic portrayal" of Joaquin Phoenix, but Affleck declined to talk about "specific things because it will affect the way people view the film." Phoenix "is someone who never shied away from letting me see all aspects of his personality," Affleck said. (EXPRESS) makes the whole thing seem like the worst episode of "Jackass" ever.

If the whole movie is an act, it's an Oscar-worthy one. Both Phoenix and Affleck are prominently credited as the film's writers. But among the many celebrities who appear on camera — Ben Stiller, for example, pitching a role in "Greenberg"; Sean "Diddy" Combs, giving Phoenix a painful rap critique; and Edward James Olmos, waxing philosophical over a drop of water — all appear genuinely mortified and/or confused by Phoenix, who becomes increasingly incoherent, disheveled, overweight, abusive and paranoid as the film goes on.

This isn't "Borat," however. If Phoenix is making fun of something — the cult of celebrity, perhaps? — it isn't clear what. And if he's sticking a thumb in Hollywood's eye, why are we the ones wincing? MICHAEL O'SULLIVAN (THE WASHINGTON POST)

Another Round of Inspiration

WWE star John Cena mentors a scrappy young underdog in a feel-good sports flick

Film Review

The inspirational sports drama is a genre that, while guaranteed to get the waterworks going, doesn't typically offer many surprises. Such is the case with "Legendary," with one exception. Instead of karate, football or boxing, the movie introduces the audience to the world of wrestling.

The underdog comes in the form of Cal Chetley (Devon Graye), a 135-pound Oklahoma teenager with a love of science, glasses and a best friend who might as well be called Dweeby McArgyle. Enter bullies, stage left. Partly due to his tormenters and also because Cal is part of a wrestling dynasty — both his estranged brother and his late father were mega-champs — he decides that he, too, will hit the mat. As it turns out, and it always does, Cal isn't very talented. But if there's one clear takeaway from any good sports movie, it's that only one thing stands between a dismal athlete and a golden trophy; a young grasshopper just needs a mentor. That would be the aforementioned brother, Mike, played by WWE superstar John Cena.

Devon Graye, right, becomes more intimidating after his requisite training montage.

"Legendary" (PG-13)

► In a Nutshell: A teen is coached in wrestling by his estranged brother.

Wrestling fans will no doubt flock to see this WWE film and won't be disappointed by Cena's entrance. Working in construction and wielding a blowtorch, he whips off his protective mask to unveil a square jaw and thigh-sized neck.

While theater-goers will probably leave "Legendary" feeling like they've seen it all before, maybe that familiarity is part of the appeal of the genre. It's like cinematic comfort food. Even if you've had it a hundred times before, there's something to be said for the certainty of a feel-good experience.

The main problem that Comet Ping Pong (5037 Connecticut Ave. NW; 202-364-0404) faces in trying to establish itself as a nightlife hot spot is that it's the only option in that area of the city. Good thing the pair of shows the restaurant turned-late-night-rock-venue is hosting this weekend are worth seeing in their entirety. On Friday, Baltimore's master of minimalist punk rock DOUBLE DAGGER shares a bill with D.C.'s HUME ($8), which will be celebrating the release of its debut album, "Penumbra," which manages to be sharp, precise and sprawling in equal measures. THE AMERICAN (R, 103 minutes) George Clooney brings his most somber, furrowed game face to the role of a hit man named Jack, who as the movie opens finds himself ambushed on an ice-covered Swedish lake. The odd gunshot notwithstanding, the scene transpires in almost complete silence. Once Jack dispatches his would-be foes in Scandinavia, he departs for Italy, where his boss (Johan Leysen) suggests he lie low for a while and await further orders.

When Jack starts to work on a high-test rifle for a gorgeous client named Mathilde (Thekla Reuten), he also begins to visit a nearby brothel and strikes up a carnal friendship with Clara (Violante Placido), a hooker-with-a-heart-of-gold character. A.H.

GOING THE DISTANCE (R, 103 minutes) When record-company flunky Garrett (Justin Long) meets newspaper intern Erin (Drew Barrymore) one summer in New York, there's no expectation that the relationship will go anywhere. He's on the rebound and she's about to leave town to return to journalism school on the West Coast. Fast-forward to the airport, where they suddenly announce that they're crazy about each other.

THE LAST EXORCISM (PG-13, 87 minutes)
The exorcism that ignites Daniel Stamm's unnerving new chiller is supposed to be a simple hoax performed by a dishonest Protestant preacher who hopes to expose the church's ancient practice as fraud. The Rev. Cotton Marcus (Patrick Fabian) has misplaced his faith. Yet Marcus sees value in the service he provides his Deep South community — that is, until a news story crosses his desk regarding a young boy who is suffocated to death by an amateur exorcist. He invites a camera crew to rural Louisiana where Louis Sweetzer (Louis Herthum) fears his timid teenage daughter, Nell (Ashley Bell), is possessed. Marcus intends to fake Nell's exorcism for the camera's benefit. Needless to say, things don't go as planned. SEAN O'CONNELL violence is so absurdly over the top as to be comical. The movie, co-directed by Robert Rodriguez and his longtime editor, Ethan Maniquis, is one big, fat comic book. It's better all around if you can laugh at it, assuming you're able to see humor in such sequences as the one in which Machete disembowels a man and uses his intestines to rappel down a building. M.O.

MESRINE: PUBLIC ENEMY NO. 1 (R, 134 minutes) This film, the second half of a two-part French drama, begins with a shot of the protagonist's bullet-riddled body slumped over the wheel of his car. Based on real events, the "Mesrine" films tell the story of notorious gangster Jacques Mesrine, who was gunned down by police in 1979 after a nearly two-decade career of brazen bank robberies, kidnappings, killings and prison breaks. Taken together, both films run more than four hours and include more than a few crime-movie clichés, beyond the foreshadowing of the story's unhappy ending. Lead actor Vincent Cassel's volatile screen presence as Mesrine — sexy one minute, terrifying the next — is worth the price of admission. M.O.

Smitten Justin Long would be completely lost without his trusty telephone.

SOUL KITCHEN (R, 100 minutes) The greasy spoon for which the movie is named is located in a sketchy section of Hamburg and run by the perpetually disheveled Zinos Kazantsakis (Adam Bousdoulos). He has too many dilemmas to list here, but they include whether he should follow his girlfriend to Shanghai, whether he should employ his dodgy brother, how to appease the health inspectors, how to pay the tax office, dealing with a real estate agent who's itching to commandeer his property and coping with a spectacularly painful back injury. It might be easier to commiserate if Zinos didn't make such terrible decisions.

THE TILLMAN STORY (R, 94 minutes) When Pat Tillman enlisted in the Army in 2002, he gave up a lucrative contract with the NFL, an act that was celebrated at the time for its selflessness and courage. Two years later, as an Army Ranger, he was killed in Afghanistan in an episode initially described as a Taliban ambush; the former Arizona Cardinals player was awarded a posthumous Silver Star, and his funeral drew thousands. Weeks later, the Army revealed that Tillman's death was "probably" the result of a fratricide. But by that time, the military and the Bush administration's narrative of Tillman's life and death had taken on a life of its own, its mythology increasingly at odds with the truth known by his closest family and friends. A.H.

Performers team up to host a new 'Stand Up to Cancer' special

Fundraising

SAT 8:00 Before competing for viewers with their new fall seasons, the networks of ABC, CBS, NBC, Fox, VH1, E!, HBO, Discovery Health, MLB Networks and Style join forces to air the "Stand Up to Cancer" fundraising event. In the spirit of cooperation, all three network news anchors — Katie Couric, Diane Sawyer and Brian Williams — share hosting duties for this commercial-free event.

Musical guests scheduled to perform include Natasha Bedingfield, Neil Diamond, the Edge, Martina McBride, Aaron Neville, Dave Stewart and Stevie Wonder.

Kris Kristofferson, right, joins Lady Antebellum on Friday's "Stand Up to Cancer."

Half the fun of these events is watching the bold-faced names working the phone bank. Look for volunteers, including George Clooney, recently feted on the Emmy Awards for his humanitarian work. Others include Kathy Bates, Dorothy Hamill, Anne Heche, Randy Jackson, Rob Lowe, Marlee Matlin, Gwyneth Paltrow, Will Smith and Denzel Washington.

The first "Stand Up to Cancer" aired in September 2008 and raised more than $100 million. It took place just before the Wall Street maelstrom and meltdown that sparked our enduring economic downturn. So it will be interesting to see how much money is raised tonight and how that compares to the pre-crash total. KEVIN MCDONOUGH (UNITED FEATURE SYNDICATE)

Horoscope

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You're likely to find it much easier than expected to get through the obstacle course that lies before you. Certain key skills will enable you to make progress quickly.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) You have a certain amount of time in which to do a number of things, and the stars are not likely to favor a random approach. Be organized, prioritized and thorough.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) Why go to great lengths to communicate a certain message when you are confident only a few choice words will get it across? Be concise, but not flat or unexpressive.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) Only you know what it takes to do what is required of you at this time. Others will be free with advice and counsel, but it may only seem like guesswork to you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You're sure to be attracted to that which comes around only once in the proverbial blue moon, but are you prepared to make the sacrifice that a commitment will demand of you?

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Interaction with younger people is likely to teach you a thing or two about yourself that you had never imagined. Take care that issues don't become clouded.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) Now is the time to come to the aid of one who has been waiting patiently for you to become available — for only you can provide what is truly needed.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) A sacrifice comes easily if you really know what it is for, who will benefit and why. If there are any such questions left unanswered, you may want to call a halt.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You're playing a dangerous game and you know it. Don't do or say anything to someone who is unusually vulnerable and unable to make the right decisions at this time.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Progress is measured in small increments, and you may become frustrated by the slow pace. What is important is that you never take a single step backward.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You can't accomplish very much on your own; you'll require a crack team to see the job done effectively — and on time. You're the leader, but others have some good ideas.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You're going to want to listen to the advice you're getting from a family member who has been there, done that. It may seem like a cliché, but there's no substitute for experience.

Samurai Sudoku

DIFFICULT

Fill in each column, row and 3x3 box with the digits 1 through 9 without repeating any. The twist in Samurai Sudoku is that the digits that appear in the overlapping boxes must work for both puzzles. A piece of advice to get you started: Don't focus on completing one grid at a time. Keep the whole puzzle in mind as you go, because filling in a number in one grid could give you clues to another.
